Short Essay on Dowry System in India 250 words

Dowry System is one of the problems for the people at the time of marriage from ancient India. The Dowry system refers to transferring or giving money to the groom's family by the bride's family. Along with the money, the bride's family will offer various things like gold, silver, land, and many more valuable gifts. If the bride's family is economically fit, they will never pause in giving these gifts to their daughter. Whereas if the bride's family belongs to a middle-class family, they will suffer the most. As this system is being followed since the ancient period, it has become a tradition of taking dowry from the bride's family. In the olden days, the dowry would be given as per the capability of the bride's family. But now in the modern period, the groom's family is just looking for the dowry and then they are going forward for marriage, which is an illegal activity.

Dowry System in India was built very deep in Indian society and every corner of the country. The main motto of the Dowry System is to help the newly married couple live for security and to fulfill their needs. The money or wealth that is transferred is to help until they settle in good positions. In some parts of India, the people will look at the dowry as seriously as the caste system. In modern days, most families treat new brides according to the amount of Dowry she brings. This dowry system makes the development of people and encourages greed in the people. The Dowry system is a burden and curse for the girl's families at the time of marriage.

Long Essay on Dowry System in 500 words

Dowry System is following from Ancient India for a good cause. As the days passed due to rules and many other greedy thoughts made the people demand the dowry. The dowry means the wealth or money given to the bride by their parents to live secure and independent after the marriage. This thought in the people was abolished, but now the amount of dowry will decide the marriage for the girls. Many middle-class families are suffering due to the Dowry system for marrying their girl child. The people in society know that the dowry system is illegal and they should inculcate that wealth is just a gift to the bride.

The journey of the Dowry System became an illegal activity because of British rule. In India, the dowry system has been followed from the past even before the British ruling. In those days it was not considered an illegal activity because of the positive way of thinking about the dowry system. During the British ruling in India, they brought a rule that no assets should not be in the name of women or girls. By this rule, the Bride families started giving dowry, i.e. assets in name of the groom. From this point on, the thinking of people about Dowry was flipped in their minds.

As the dowry system was messed up by the rules, the thinking of people about the girl child in their families changed. The economically fit families did not have trouble with this dowry system, but the people below the poverty line are facing problems with this system. As people started thinking that a girl child in the family is a burden and curse to them. From then on the people started thinking about boys in the family rather than girls. This leads to an imbalance in the sex ratio in the country due to a decrease in girls. Then people encourage women to foeticide, leaving girl child after birth, and many other crimes for the girl child.

All the changes make the dowry a nightmare for the bride's family during the time of marriage. If a girl was born into a below poverty line family from that time, the father starts to save the money for that day. In modern India, caste and dowry play an important role in the marriages of girls. Present days have become as dowry makes marriage for the girls, but people also see the bride or groom with dowry rather than qualities of them. As the people change, the groom's families demand the dowry; even the bride's parents also encourage the dowry and fulfill their demands. Even after the dowry, the treatment of the bride in the groom's home is very bad, which leads to divorce and some even to death due to pressure.

As the illegal activities towards women and improper sex ratio in the country combine brought up the laws against the dowry. The Dowry Prohibition Act of 1961 is one of the laws against dowry. Under this law, the givers and takers of dowry are both to be punished. All the laws and care of the government had brought fear in people about the dowry, and it had been demolished to a certain extent in the country.
