

Human Rights Essay :

What are Human Rights? Human Rights are referred to as the rights we have to exist in society. In other words, human rights are the rules to respect the people and their feelings to live combined. These are also meant as the right of the people to live with freedom and combine the people for the unity of a country. Human Rights have arisen because some people treat irrespectively and suppress the feelings of the people. Similarly, as the previous points, the below was described the human rights with the essay on Human Rights. The below essays were included information about human rights and social justice in India.

Short Essay on Human Rights in 300 words

Human Rights are nothing but the right of the people to live with freedom in society. Human rights are important for people in the present modern world. It had become a tradition in minds of people in India due to the following of people from the past. In the past Ancient India, the lower wage and lower caste people were treated badly and suppressed their freedom, feelings. The lower caste people like SC, ST people were treated lowly because of their work, behavior, education, and based on various things. In the past days of the world, the Britishers ruled various parts of the world they develop fear in the minds of the people. Britishers played with the feelings of the people and with fear in people they start discriminating against people in ruling areas. The only thing that Britishers made is to expose their power and unity to the world. They didn't have any discrimination within their people they only discriminate against the other people of various parts of the world. In this way, the past had discrimination in the people and they did not have human rights in those days for their freedom.

After the independence of India, human rights are framed for the equality of people and their freedom in society. The laws are framed for every type of discrimination and punishment for the people who had done the discrimination. These are the laws for the national level human rights and also applicable for the people from other countries. International human rights are also framed for the people at any misleads that happened in the country. There was an International court bench for human rights for people all over the world. International Human Rights are needed because as the people of the world move from one country to another in need of work and basic needs. However, human rights are important for people in every activity of life and mainly for the presence of people in society.

Long Essay on Human Rights in 500 words

Human Rights are the set of rules framed for the need of people at various times according to the intolerance of people all over the world. There are various types of intolerance of people in individuals or groups. Human Rights are very useful in the modern days of the world to fight against the people who discriminate against them. These are useful for people from the twentieth century to today. These are framed at the National level and International level accordingly to the scenarios that happen for the people. Human Rights are framed in the olden days but their use and importance have been well useful during the present days.

The need for Human rights is the need for freedom of the people in society and their rights to live with people. Human rights are framed by considering the illegal activities that happened in the past and how people were troubled with those activities. The need for human rights is to abolish the negative thinking in the people towards other people. In the Ancient days of India, the people are divided into 4 categories but only in the last category people were faced with trouble from the other.

As the people from the lower caste work as sanitation, fishing, butchers, cobblers, potters, etc. These people work hard rather than upper caste people and still, they were never received the importance of respect for their work. There will be huge intolerance towards these people like these people should not talk against, walk without chappals, should not educate, and many more.

In India, the Human Rights of the people are framed after the independence of the country. These human rights are included in some parts of the constitution. The constitution is framed by considering all the people equal and developing equality with the people for the country's unity. As the people don't have the set of rules with power and money they can trouble the lower class or lower caste people. Human Rights are bought as Human Rights laws for every way of discrimination to keep and end. The violation of Human Rights laws leads to heavy punishments for the people in individuals and groups also.

Human Rights are divided into three types namely Civil-political, socio-economic, Collective-developmental. On the other hand not only in India but there are also various parts of the world people are discriminated against by people in their country or from other countries like Britishers. In the past mostly Britishers, Germans had domination on people where ever they move. The main power behind the power is equality in the people. They were divided into levels at work but not the life and freedom of their people.

However, human rights are framed at the National and International levels for the freedom of people in any part of the world. National Human rights are applied to their people within the country and international human rights are helpful for countries to solve the issues that happened to their people by other country people.

There are Human rights laws, Human Rights Commission, Human Rights acts, Human Rights offices that are ready to help and solve the issues. In India, National Human Rights day is celebrated on 10th December every year. There will be a theme for Human Rights day every year that depends on the issues happening to the people. The Governments of countries should also educate the people through the Human Rights campaigns, Human Rights posters in public places, Human Rights competitions to reach people.

Human Rights are needed for people not to mislead the track of people's behavior in society. These will help the people to move freely in society and people will get fear discrimination against other people. All these laws make the people that every one of the worlds is equal and right to have the others. As we know everyone is equal before nature but man-made things like castes, untouchability makes people's rights break in society. Every person should follow human rights and preach to the people who are not moving against Human Rights.

Quotes on Human Rights

There may be times when we are powerless to prevent injustice, but there must never be a time when we fail to protest."

Knowledge makes a man unfit to be a slave.

A right delayed is a right denied.

To deny people their human rights is to challenge their very humanity.

The rights of every man are diminished when the rights of one man are threatened.

There can be no peace without development, no development without peace, and no lasting peace or sustainable development without respect for human rights and the rule of law.

Until justice rolls down like water and righteousness like a mighty stream.

Human rights are not a privilege conferred by the government. They are every human being's entitlement under his humanity.